Details: PAULA, is a single romantically bankrupt sexual health nurse, who struggles to forgo her pride and admit the truths of her desire for sex, love, and friendship. Online profiles are riddled with untruths and exaggerations – and Paula's is no exception.

After a crushing break up, Paula reasons that if Love finds you when you're not looking, it will stay away when you are. And what better place to find great people you won't fall in love with, than online? But is this what Paula really wants?

It's time she took control.

The Dangers of Online Dating is a dark comedy that gives insight into a generation of dating rules defined by a desire to remain unbound.

Dating History

THE DANGERS OF ONLINE DATING creator/writer/director, Brianne Nord-Stewart, is no stranger to single life. In fact, she has waded into the swamp of desperation that is online dating, and returned with an uncomfortably sexy reflection of it

Armed with an enthusiastic endurance for bad dates, Brianne wears her dating scars with pride: Guy who lives in a van with heart-shaped windows? Dated him. Guy with full chest religious tattoo? Dated him. Guy who brings presents and hisses at you on a first date? (Yes, hisses). Dated him. Motorcycle_Guy? Well, now you should just watch the show.

There are lots of happily-ever-after stories.

And obviously, not everyone you meet online is crazy.

But Brianne is.

And she has a proclivity to stick around longer than she should – just to see what might happen. And that’s just good TV (safety first!).

Now which came first: The Show Idea, or The Dating?

Brianne began dating with hopes of finding some male companionship. When reports of her extracurricular activities began to circulate, a friend suggested she write about it. Brianne, being stubborn, said no (that’s silly, and egotistical). But then, her adventures got really crazy...The rest is history. Her ego has only grown slightly.

The cherry on the cake?

Brianne is still single.

And once again, online dating.

Brianne is experienced in exploiting our humiliations to the point that we’re able to laugh at ourselves. Her short grad film TROLLS, which launched her into the international film circuit, followed a couple of 8 year olds trying to figure out what “doing it” really means. The short played at festivals all around the world, and won numerous awards including an Honorable Mention at the Academy Accredited Clermont-Ferrand Int’l Film Festival. Brianne’s recent short film, BEAT AROUND THE BUSH (which you can guess is a word play for something naughty), was funded by the Harold Greenberg Fund, Movie Central, and The Movie Network. It was shot in Vancouver in September and is currently in post-production. The Harold Greenberg Fund is also developing the same concept into a feature film.

Now, most importantly:

Who is That-Redhead-Holding-The-Banana?

Paula Burrows. Brianne was so taken with her while working on a music video together, that the series lead was renamed “Paula”. It just seemed to fit.

Rounding out the lead cast are Byron Noble (as “Alexandre”, the gay best friend) who recently guest starred as Ari Ziskind on FARGO opposite Colin Hanks & Billy Bob Thorton, and Stacy Mahieux (as “Molly” the Roommate), who played a supporting role in a feature film that Brianne edited (yes Brianne is a also an editor, and once a year moonlights as a second unit camera assistant on shows like FARGO)

We will also unofficially say that 80% of the THE DANGERS OF ONLINE DATING cast has dated online. We won’t even get started on the crew, (who are also amazing by the way).
